

ENGLISH TO VOTE ON THE WAR POLICY

FIRST GENERAL ELECTION SINCE THE WAR STARTED AROUSES ENGLAND

SERIOUS PROBLEM WITH THE UNCERTAINTY OF THE SOLDIERS, WOMEN AND SINN FEIN VOTE
[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

London, Nov. 15.—The issue in the coming elections is whether the country will endorse Lloyd George's proposal that the present coalition government should continue to govern, or should be replaced by a new government to continue after the war for the work of making peace and carrying on the labor of reconstruction.

Never before were British political conditions as chaotic as they are today. The fractured two-party lines, the electoral reform bill adopted by Parliament during the summer of 1917, virtually doubled the number of voters. It gave the ballot to all over 20 years of age, and sold out the old order. This added six million females and two million males to the voting list. How the women will vote and what parties the soldiers will support, none can predict.

The prospect of plunging the country into the excitement and expense of an election at such a time as the present has excited growing opposition. On the other hand the legal life of the present House of Commons expires on the 1st of January, and it has extended its own tenure of office from term to term by resolutions. This has been an informal proceeding which would have been impossible except that it had the endorsement of public opinion in view of the prolonged and an election during the great war.

The Irish Question

So far as Ireland is concerned the lection probably means the total disappearance of the old Nationalist party. Redmond, a Protestant, is elected, and the Sinn Féiners are excluded to sweep southern Ireland but the members elected by the Sinn Féiners have always refused to take their seats.

Lloyd George's Position

In addition to trying to hold together his Conservative and Liberal supporters, Mr. Lloyd George is trying to reconcile the Asquith faction. Mr. Asquith could have had a high seat in cepted it. There was two obstacles owever, home rule and protection.

one of these the Conservatives will ow have and the other is objected o by the liberals.

BEN BOLT

Story of This Famous Song

Dr. Thomas Dunn English born in Philadelphia, Pa., June 29, 1812, studied law and was called to the bar in 1834, but studied medicine and practiced in 1848, varying his labors by acting as editor, and contributing both prose and verse to various publications.

Nathaniel P. Willis, one of the immortalists of American literature, was editing the "New Mirror" and asked English to contribute a poem, preferably in English. English wrote the poem, his task by achieving the first line, "O, don't you remember Sweet Alice, Ben Bolt?" the name being considered conclusive evidence that it was power was a suit, and that at that.

To this song several girls were adapted, but in 1848 it was introduced into the Mexican war drama, "The Battle of Puebla," which was a success. English found a melody from which he evolved the present arrangement. At once, "Ben Bolt" became the rage, it sung, whistled, hummed, and whistled all over the country, and crossed the Atlantic almost ahead of the packets.

Only a few years ago Dr. Maunier in his successful novel "Trilby" revived the public interest in "Ben Bolt," making its simple melody the wonder and charm of the musical world. It entered the splendid vocal chords of a French Griselette, while under the hypnotic influence of a Jewish musician.

This song is found in "The Book of a Thousand Songs," which has had such a wonderful distribution by this paper. The volume is unique, and beyond doubt the best song book ever published. It should be in every home on the land. Look for the coupon elsewhere in today's paper, and get the book at your earliest opportunity.

SANATORIUM PROBLEM POSTPONED BY BOARD AFTER WORDY BATTLE

COUNTY BOARD, BY VOTE OF SEVENTEEN TO SIXTEEN, DECIDE TO ADJOURN QUESTION UNTIL APRIL MEETING.

ASK TO RECONSIDER

George Woodruff and W. W. Dalton Leading Fight for Sanatorium, Demand Reconsideration of Question.

After one of the bitterest fights ever staged during a meeting of county board, the resolution recommending an appropriation of $22,000 for a Rock County Tuberculosis Sanatorium was adjourned until the April meeting of the board by a vote of seventeen to sixteen. George Woodruff later changed his vote, making it eighteen to fifteen.

Mr. Woodruff stated that he changed his vote for the purpose of having the power to ask for a reconsideration of the resolution during the afternoon. It was stated at the meeting that the resolution is finally laid until the April meeting that several of the members will walk out of the meeting and resign as members of the county board.

The board started shortly after the meeting opened this morning and arguments were plentiful from then on until a vote was called for. It was during the question that has been witnessed at a county board meeting, but it is expected that it will be surpassed during the afternoon unless the resolution is adjourned.

Mr. Richardson and Emmett McGowan have been the leaders in the fight against the resolution and are opposing such man as George Woodruff, William Briggs, W. W. Dalton, Simon Smith and W. H. Paulson. Neither side was sure of victory before the resolution was voted on, and several wordy battles were waged during the morning.

George Woodruff, in discussing the situation, stated shortly before the afternoon session opened that he was sure that the question was not reconsidered by the members that W. H. Paulson, W. W. Dalton, himself and several others would walk out of the meeting room and resign as members of the county board.

It developed during the session that twenty tuberculosis patients have been sent to sanatoriums since the beginning of this year. Of those twenty, three have died, and one has been discharged. It is estimated that if the question is adjourned until the April meeting that at least two more will die in that time.

Two patients have recently been sent to Wales and there are more patients awaiting to be sent as soon as word is received that they can be accommodated.

Mr. Woodruff, in discussing the problem, stated that the men fighting against the resolution refused to give any reason for being against it. Mr. McGowan asserts that while fighting against it at the present time, he is in favor of a tuberculosis sanatorium.

Peas cannot keep out of jail. Every time he is arrested and they are many, he insists that it is an outrage and that he shouldn't be locked up. Peter has a habit of being arrested, taken into court, pleading not guilty and getting out on bail. He is now waiting trial on two counts of drunkenness. This morning however, it was different and he was given a great surprise when he was sentenced to serve ten days in the county jail.

Gus Lee was assessed fifteen dollars and costs or twenty days when he entered a plea of guilty to the charge of drunkenness. D. Eastman had his charge of drunkenness dismissed by Judge Maxfield.

YOUTHS LOOT DOUGLAS HARDWARE STORE

Three Juvenile Law-breakers Taken for Robbery at Store—Admit Their Guilt to Chief of Police.

George Huggins, Albert Hensling and Walter O'Meara, all ranging in age from ten to twelve years, were brought to the police station yesterday afternoon charged with breaking into the Douglas hardware store on South River street, Sunday.

Mr. Douglas, owner of the store, reported to Chief Champlin yesterday morning that the thieves had gained entrance to the building by cutting through the glass in the door and entering the cellar way. They then pried the cellar door open and gained access to the store.

After a careful investigation, Chief Champlin committed the boys to the county jail. A great deal of damage was done by the boys in gaining entrance to the building.

After questioning the boys for a short time they admitted the crime and brought several boxes of tools to the police station. They shied to be arrested, however, but will endeavor to make a settlement with Mr. Douglas.

CHICAGO MARKETS.
Chicago, Nov. 15.—A storm in the cattle market since the armistice began warrants expectancy that November and December prices will attain the highest level of the year. Since Monday, gains of 50 cents per head in some cases have been recorded.

The stream of range beef that has been pouring across the Missouri River since July is subsiding. Improvement contracts and the local market killers are taking everything wearing a little tallow, robbing the field to satisfy urgent needs.

Chicago has received 30,000 less cattle this week than last. Western markets are getting few cattle for improvement contracts and on the local market killers are taking everything wearing a little tallow, robbing the field to satisfy urgent needs.

The Food Administration last night announced that it has been arranged that the November price basis for hogs $17.50 minimum, shall continue through December. It is highly desirable that the lighter weight hogs be held back for the next thirty days.

It was stated. All available hog products should be held back until the first of December for foreign shipment in December and January and thereafter.

Thursday's cattle receipts were 15,000, of which 5,000 were held back for export direct to packers from other markets. Leaving a small residue. A strong trade developed, although speculation was less active than on the previous session.

Choice to prime fed steers $19.00@19.70
Good to choice steers 17.25@19.00
Good to medium steers 15.50@17.25
Fancy steers 18.50@19.00
Light killing steers 10.00@13.00
Good to choice cows 10.50@13.50

Good to choice feeders 10.00@11.50
Common fair stockers 8.50@10.00
Good to choice calves 16.00@17.00

Sixty thousand hogs were more than packers could kill. A 10c lower market resulted, the carover being necessarily heavy as all killers had an accumulation. The top was $18, with the bulk at $17.25@17.75, average cost being down to the government minimum.

Heavy butchers $17.85@18.00
Medium and light butchers 17.75@17.80
Light bacon hogs 17.00@17.50

Rough 16.25@16.50
Fair to good pigs 14.50@15.50

Sheep Market steady.
Receipts all short of the 30,000 estimate, making a steady to strong trade. Choice lambs would have passed $15.25, but $15 took a good kind of fed westerns, natives at $14.50 requiring quality.

Good to choice lambs $14.75@15.25

Health's Greatest Ally and Foe of Disease

When sickness overtakes one, the family physician prescribes MILK. Why does he do this? Because Milk is the most easily digested food. It does not overwork the digestive organs or unduly tax the heart like meats and many other heavy foods. It assists nature in bringing the system back to normal.

Don't wait until sickness overtakes you and have your doctor prescribe Milk. Prescribe it YOURSELF RIGHT NOW as a regular part of your daily menu, to the exclusion of a part of the hard-to-digest foods that you have been relying on.

Best Health Insurance Policy in the World

Pasteurized Milk is Safe Milk. And when used liberally in your home it will prove to be one of the best "health insurance policies" in the world. It will insure health by keeping the system in a normal condition to resist diseases.

But don't take chances with milk of uncertain quality. Be sure it is clarified and pasteurized. For health's sake drink more Milk. For economy's sake double your milk order and for safety's use Clarified and Pasteurized Milk sold by THE JANESVILLE PURE MILK CO.

BILL CHANDLER WILL PLAY WITH NAVY FIVE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Great Lakes, Ill., Nov.—Around "Bill" Chandler, Wisconsin's de luxe captain a year ago, and a stack of other Western conference stars will be created the 1913 Great Lakes Naval Training station basketball team.

Chandler is generally regarded as the prize center in the west. His superlative shot making ability plus the free throw shooting was largely instrumental in leading the Big Ten title for the Madison institution last year.

As support for Chandler the station is able to produce George Haines who captained Illinois in 1912-13. Haines absorbed Ralph Jones's system with the Illinois, and is said to possess tremendous class as a guard.

A third conference captain in a "rob" uniform is Harry Nielson, ex-leader of the Northwestern (University) football team. Nielson is said to be at present, but will be available for a forward job later.

One of the big men of the fifth regiment is "Reddy" Kamp, face captain of the Washington University team. Kamp is a guard—one of those built close to the ground who literally hunt their forwards.

The conference held in not yet exhausted as "Don" Baklund, varsity man with the University of Minnesota last year, has completed his detention period and will be out for the season. Baklund, like Kamp, is a defensive man.

Langenstern, a Freeport, Ill. boy, and a tackle on the football team, is housed as a basket ball wizard. Like Kamp is a guard. So is Paddy Driscoll of Northwestern. Driscoll achieved his sport reputation on the football, but his greater marvel on the court is his greater marvel on the floor than on the striped field.

A trip to the Pacific coast is being contemplated by Fred H. Young, center of the Big Ten outfit who has been placed in charge of the squad. Young's idea is to book games in many cities en route.

CHARLES COMISKEY ELATED OVER PEACE

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Chicago, Nov. 14.—Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago Americans, is to happy over the sudden ending of the world war. He thinks about the resumption of professional baseball.

"There will be time enough for that later on," said President Comiskey. "Manager Rowland and I have not made any plans for next season. A few months ago things looked a bit dubious for everybody, and the chances for baseball were anything but bright, but the good news came sooner than expected."

"I can say, however, that every member of my ball club who enlisted certainly will find job waiting him when he returns. I hope they all will be back with us."

MORRIS MILLER

A correspondent writes in to inquire what was the most "top-sided" score ever recorded in a ball game. The question is in line with that one as to whether the score was 1 to 0. A win for B that the winning team would score "twice as many runs" as the losing team. Perhaps the top-sided score should be decided on the basis of percentage of top-sided scores and the questioner can reach his own conclusions.

July 24, 1882—Chicago, 35; Cleveland, 4.

June 20, 1897—Chicago, 36; Louisville, 7.

August 21, 1883—Providence, 28; Philadelphia, 0.

1887—New York, 29; Philadelphia, 1.

May 13, 1878 — Hartford, 28; Mutual, 3.

June 20, 1883—Boston, 20; Philadelphia, 4.

August 17, 1894—Philadelphia, 29; Louisville, 4.

On May 7 of this year Boston beat Brooklyn 6 to 1. The game was played at Philadelphia 25 to 0 that was the championship top-sided score on record, but the winners made only 12 more runs than the losers, while when Chicago beat Cleveland 35 to 4 that was a 31-run defeat, and when Chicago beat Louisville 35 to 7 that was a 28-run defeat.

Anyway, there is the record as it has been furnished us.

The story is told that Bill Killifer, former Chicago Cubs' catcher, who is doing some sort of military service or other at Camp Custer, Mich., is in bad as a result of a ball game recently played. Killifer made a bad throw and let in the winning run for the opposing team, but that is not all of it.

That same throw on its way hence, hit the smoke stack of the building, upset all the plans for the next meal, caused a riot among the cooks and got Killifer in so bad generally that when he passed his plate for soiling so it is said, it is ignored and he's high to starving.

All because of one bad throw. Marvin Goodwin, former $15,000 pitching beauty of the St. Louis Cardinals, returned to the scene of his former triumphs recently, but not to assert new claims as a diamond star. He is now lieutenant of the Army aviation corps, having just received his commission after taking the flying course at a Texas camp, and he stopped over in St. Louis on his way east, where he expected to ship for France and action.

Goodwin, secured by the Cardinals from Milwaukee near the end of the 1912 season, was a sensation to the close of the campaign, but he saw his duty and "done" it, enlisting as an aviator before the 1913 season opened. He had a long period of training in Texas and now is fit to try for honors of the air in actual service. While in Texas he pitched several ball games and showed wonderful form. He hopes to return to the diamond when Uncle Sam gives him a release after the war.

The Philadelphia Athletics have twenty men in the service. If they can't win the pennant they are out to win the war.

Now, if Connie Mack were over there he would be tall enough to take the place of an observation balloon and so could do his bit along with the boys from the team.

The Philadelphia Athletics have gained undisputed possession of Scott Perry. Now, as soon as this war is out of the way, Connie Mack can go after last place with all his old-time abandon.

Physical Exertion and Heart Trouble. The only way of surely determining whether a sufferer from an irritable heart can bear extensive exertion is to put him through a series of gradually increasing exercises, states British Medical Journal, with careful examination after exercise.

One Grand, Sweet Song. Composer Buroni, gallant cuss, says: "Every woman is a song," which we move to amend to read: "Every woman is a popular song."—Buffalo News.

Tales of the Friendly Forest

Well, when Mrs. Mole saw that Uncle Lucky meant business and wouldn't leave without a ton of coal, as I mentioned in the story before this Mr. Mole, the crabbed old coal dealer, said:

All right. If you'll shovel the coal into your sleighmobile you can take a ton, and then he showed the two little rabbits where the coal bunkers were, and after that he gave them each a shovel and told them to get to work.

But, oh dear me! It was a dreadful hard job. And pretty soon Billy Bunny looked like a colored child.

and Uncle Lucky like Uncle Tom Cabin! And the coal dust got into their ears and eyes until they had to stop working. But, wasn't it lucky, by that time they had shoveled a ton of coal into the sleighmobile. So they set off for Cousin Cottontail's house and when they got there they went out to the pigsty and took the long trough, which is the wooden plate the pigs eat out of, you know, and then they knocked off one end and let the coal run down into the cellar through the little hole, just like a regular coal man does. And after that they went into the house and took a big piece of brown soap and a scrubbing brush and cleaned themselves, for they were as black as tar babies, and maybe blacker. And when they were clean again they were so tired that they fell asleep and didn't wake up until supper time.

Well, after supper Mrs. Cottontail said: "I think you'd all better spend the night here, for it's late, and goodness knows it may be so cold that you'll freeze on the way home."

So they all went into the parlor and made the photograph sing every song it knew, but the one they liked the best was—

Over there, over there, In the trenches, cold and bare, I have sent my soldier lad, And my heart is very sad, For I miss his winning smile, And I'm thinking all the while If the cruel, wicked Hun Shoots my soldier with his gun, How can mother do her part? When she has a broken heart?

And when this song was ended, dear, kind Uncle Lucky took off his spectacles and wiped his eyes with his blue silk pocket handkerchief, and Mrs. Bunny looked at Billy and began to cry, for she felt as if the war would never end, and if it didn't she knew some day that her little bunny boy would be going over to France to die.

"Oh, let's have something cheerful," said Mrs. Cottontail.

"Oh, let's have something cheerful," said Mrs. Cottontail.

ful," said Mrs. Cottontail, and she made the Victoria sing:

In the good old summer time The soda fountains spout And syrups flow and peaches grow And ice cream comes come out, And when the air is hot and dry A soda every day I'll buy. And so I'll whistle while I think A soda water soon I'll drink. And then the little black cricket came out and said: "It's time for bed, creek, creek, creek!" And Uncle Lucky put on his nightcap and wound his got with a chain and soon every one was sound asleep.

HEART AND HOME PROBLEMS

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO MISS THOMPSON, IN CARE OF THE GAZETTE

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Last Easter I met a soldier and thought, I loved him and he loved me. We became engaged and he seemed to be a nice boy. I wrote his mother asking her to let him marry me. She had a wife living, and she told me not to marry him, and told him so. He said if I did not marry him he would kill himself.

Then I learned that he was keeping company with girls who were not nice and we fell out. Then he wrote asking me to let him come back and said he did really care for me. I wrote him and told him I did not want any more to do with him.

Now he is on his way to France and his wife is telling all kinds of lies about me, saying he told her. I don't believe he has ever said anything, as he has been to let him come back and said he did really care for me. I wrote him and told him I did not want any more to do with him.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a student in high school and do not have much time to write. I am practically "broke" most of the time. How can I keep from letting her know that I cannot afford to keep her as my close friend?

If you are close friends you should explain to the girl that you are not amusements while you are attending school. You can walk and read to school and have very good times without incurring expense. You should, however, try to take her somewhere occasionally to show that you appreciate her comradeship.

If she is not the kind of a girl to like you because you are interesting you had better give her up and find another girl who will not demand so much.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I have been going with a fellow for a long time and I have grown to love him. He said he loved me, but he told me the second time I went with him that he was a married man. He and his wife don't get along and he is trying to secure a divorce, but his wife won't give it to him. What would you advise? Will it be best for me to forget him?

(2) Do you think a boy loves a girl when he asks her to kiss him every time he calls to see her?

(1) Yes, forget the man. You cannot afford to go with a married man because of your reputation. The trouble he is having with his wife must be his fault or he would have got a divorce.

(2) It is no indication that a man loves a woman if he asks to kiss her every time they are together.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) If a gentleman brings a girl a box of candy should it be opened by him or by her?

(2) If he brings it when there is a crowd around him, open it then or keep it until later?

(1) She should open it.

(2) If he is a slight acquaintance he "probably" means that the candy should be for the occasion and the girl should open it. But if he is a close friend, the candy is for her personally and she should keep it.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am nineteen years old and work. I have good hours. Considering this, are Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday nights too often to have dates?

Two or three evenings a week would be all right.

EVERYDAY ETIQUETTE

(Miss Kelly will answer in this column all questions on matters of etiquette addressed to her in care of this paper. If a personal reply is desired, enclose a three-cent stamp.)

A young girl going to business should be neat and trim, wear clean short waists, tidy skirts made in waving length and her feet should be comfortably shod.

FLORA: The announcement of the engagement of a young man to a young lady.

M. S.: As your cousin's arrival is indefinite and her stay will be short, why not invite her to telephone the friends you wish her to meet while here. They might bring their knitting and work while they chat. Elaborate parties have gone out since the advent of the war, so let whatever you give be informal, cozy and also useful.

friend. (G. R.)

ANSWER: Perhaps you neglected to enclose a three-cent stamp envelope addressed to your sick friend. I am not much at a loss what to say to your sick friend. Generally sick friends are difficult to deal with in practice—so difficult that most physicians will not even attempt it.

There are numerous cases on record in which, after prolonged effort, the poor doctor has discovered, at last, that the sick friend was wholly hypothetical. This is in practice, remember, it may be different in print, though I confess I never take a sick friend so serious as the sick friend's best friend seems to take the sick friend in print.

Please State Your Question.

I will be grateful if you can tell me about the disease of syphilis. ANSWER: Syphilis is a very old disease, at least as old as the Sphinx, and it is the most loathsome of all diseases. It is a disease that causes a woman to feel a thing a fact before it has been proved to be one revealed to Edith Ferrol, that a sentimental attachment existed between her brother and Lil Blake's frothy debutante niece, Fay Summers. Her intuition was strengthened when, a moment later, Lil and the young woman hurried to the city and stayed in the accompaniment of effervescent chatter and hilarity. Edith had vaguely known that Miss Summers liked Ned. But until this moment she had regarded her as a harmless flapper romance, superficial and fleeting. The promptness with which Edith left his work, his hand, his hair, his hasty inspection of his fingernails and—most telling of all—a woman—the way he bent the head and chin, slender Fay in greening her, showed Edith that an interest apart from the mundanity of putting a new kind of water heater on the market, how much of his brother's mind. How much of his mind it occupied, how urgent it was to be satisfied she must find out.

Why, you wonderful boy! Lil was smiling and expatiating gallantly. "Let's go straight upstairs and see if the water really does go hot instantly. Come, Fay, child!"

There was an indefinable, disturbing something in Lil's tone, in her manner as she spoke to her flapper niece and glanced at the eligible young man, doubly eligible if his intention was really panning out.

It was a sort of triumphal ceremony, this prosaic turning of a spigot and, after an instant's suspense, the water gushed forth, actually gush forth, Edith's heart leaped with joy.

"Oh! How perfectly marvelous!" Lil Blake was in ecstasies of praise. "We must celebrate! You all come over to dinner tonight—just a little family party! You dear children and us old folks!"

And at Lil's meaningful mouthing of the phrase "family party" Edith's joy was dashed with ice.

—BY— RUTH CAMERON

A PAINT BRUSH AND UNITY.

Did I ever write you of the way in which a friend of mine who had to furnish several rooms on small means, and wanted them to look attractive, accomplished that miracle in this day of high prices?

She had lived in a little rented house with only two bedrooms. She bought a large old-fashioned house, and to help pay for it planned to redecorate with a paint brush.

She made the Furniture Match. And this is what she did: She went to several second-hand furniture stores and in them selected most of the necessary furnishings. Next she decided on a color scheme for each of the rooms—One was to be French blue and white, the other gray and white. Then, armed with a paint brush, she started out to unify these furnishings.

The Blue and White Room. You cannot imagine, unless you ever saw the like done, how attractive the results were. For the blue room she had bought a very plain ding present. She had also let little Kink-up singe all the hairs off his new Mastodontus skin skirt which were extra long and glossy.

He'd get even with her though, he thought as he brooded over his wrongs and broiled over a fire a tuskaloosus he had spit on a hickorydickory stick.

Anyhow, where had the fat-footed jig gone? He had scathed the severely decorated wall with his club for leagues around but he couldn't find her, the ugly-headed rataplunk!

Just as Iron-Mug thought the above thoughts, Deadgrass-hair, herself, repeated himself.

"You will, will you?" he thundered, repeating himself.

"Yes, yes," hurriedly cried the poor cave-woman.

"No, you won't!" Iron-Mug howled, still tapping her harder and harder on the head with the red-hot stick—time in a different place.

"No, no, then!" yowled Deadgrass-hair agreeably.

"Yes, you will!" he thundered, repeating himself.

"Yes, yes," hurriedly cried the poor cave-woman.

"No, you won't!" Iron-Mug howled, still tapping her harder and harder on the head with the red-hot stick—time in a different place.

"No, no, then!" yowled Deadgrass-hair agreeably.

youth to a battered old waste basket by painting it blue; and as a finishing touch (I saw the room just before its occupant came into it) she put a blue Japanese bowl (of ten-cent vintage) filled with baby sunflowers on the little stand.

The Rose and Gray Room. In the rose and gray room she painted the furniture she had collected gray. Instead of a bed she had a couch with a gray couch-cover and several sofa cushions in rose and gray cretonne matching the overhangings of the curtains. The paper was a soft rose on which she hung a few pictures in gray frames.

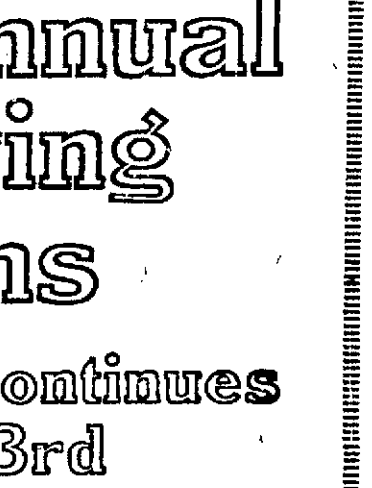

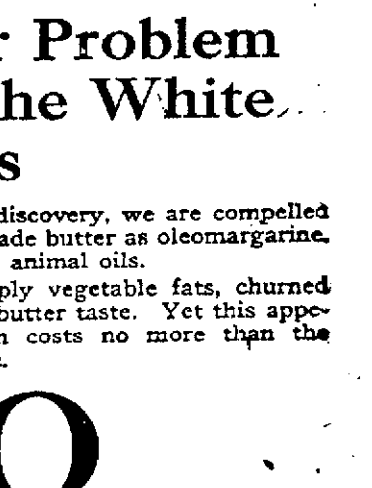

When she told me how little each room had cost, even with the fresh hangings and wall paper, I could scarcely believe it.

"And you'd scarcely believe it, either, if I told you how much time it took," she said, with a sigh. "My, but I'm sick of painting! I shy at the sight of a paintbrush, but after all I think it's worth it," she finished, with a look of pride about her.

And I agreed, with all sincerity, I have seen the same thing done in a summer cottage; and it certainly is wonderful what unity and harmony a paintbrush and a little good taste and thought can create out of chaos.

THE STRUGGLE

THE MOVING picture nasco left Edith feeling like a caged bird, exhausted with ineffectual beating against bars. Cudge her brain as she might, turn and that to get a path into financial freedom, she met failure every time. Added to her sense of bafflement was the knowledge that she had hurt her husband's pride and wounded his feelings.

Daily, too, she read the dreary news of war and want and the everswearing cost of life's necessities. Edith's mind was simply torn and that to get a path into financial freedom, she met failure every time. Added to her sense of bafflement was the knowledge that she had hurt her husband's pride and wounded his feelings.

FIVE FRIDAYS

CHAPTER I.

"We certainly do," I assented idly. "Why not give our digestive apparatus a rest?" she propounded.

"Why not?" I rushed to my doom. I was having my two weeks' vacation and was too happy at being able to spend it on the island to care anything about an argument.

"I suggest that we fast for a week." A suggestion like that put me in a nice fix. I don't mind stating that at that time I was about 210 pounds of eligible bachelor, aged thirty-five, comfortably in love with Lucille, too old and set in the complacent selfishness of single blessedness ever to pretend to be a Romeo. The idea of fasting gave me a sinking sensation right where there was the most room to sink.

"What?" I ejaculated, forgetting for the moment that I had a reputation for ready repartee.

"I said, 'Why not fast for a week?' I read an article by Lipton S. Clair about it just this morning. He claims that fasting thoroughly rebuilds the system, gets rid of all toxins and increases the mental efficiency 50 per cent."

She picked up a magazine which was propped open face downward on the lower shelf of the porch table. "Eating three meals a day is simply a habit. We have made tyrants of our stomachs. They demand to be fed every few hours, and if we answer that demand we are slaves. There, that sounds like the reasoning of a thinker, doesn't it?"

"It sounds more like the reasoning of a thinker than of an eater."

Standers, Walkers, "Gets-It" for Corns

World Has Never Known It's Equal.

"What will get rid of my corn?" The answer has been made by millions—there's only one corn-remover that you can bank on, that's absolutely certain, that makes any corn on earth peel right off like a banana skin, and that's the magic "Gets-It." Tight shoes and dancing even when you have a corn need not disturb you if you apply a few drops of "Gets-It" on the corn or callus. You want a corn-remover, not a corn sealer. You don't have to fool with corns—you peel them right off with your fingers by using "Gets-It." Cutting makes corns grow and bleed. Why use irritating salves or make a bundle of your toes with tape or bandages? Why bother and still have the corn? Use "Gets-It"—your corn-pain is over, the corn is a "gone" sure as the sun rises.

"Gets-It," the guaranteed, money-back corn-remover, the only sure way, costs but a tripe at any drug store. Mfg. by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill. Sold in Janesville, and recommended as the best corn remedy by Smith Drug Co.

RESINOL CLEARS AWAY EMBARRASSING PIMPLES

March 30.—"Some time ago pimples began to appear on my forehead, and spread so that people remarked about them, and I didn't like to go anywhere on that account. I tried various creams, soaps, and skin remedies, but nothing seemed to help me. A friend of mine who had the same trouble told me to clear her skin with Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, so I tried them. After the first application all the redness and soreness disappeared, and after two or three applications my friends began to ask me what I used, my face looked so much better.

"Now I can go to places without being ashamed of those awful pimples, and I will never be without Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap." (Signed) Miss Jessie Torrance, 67 Beech St., Rutherford, N. J.

PETEY DINK—NOW WHEREVER THE GANG GOES, PETEY MUST GO, TOO.

Lucille reproved my slippiness. "I think it would do us all good." "But I feel all right now," I called her attention to an obvious fact. She dismissed my objection. "You can't be healthy unless you fast for a like a grizzly bear is a doubtful advantage and, besides, I don't believe it is possible for a bear to shell enough peanuts to live on.

Lucille called a meeting to discuss ways and means.

"First of all," she said, "when the supply boat comes today we'll make them take back every edible thing they have brought, together with what we have on hand, so that we won't be tempted. Isn't it lucky our cottage is on an island all by itself so that it won't be possible for one of us to cheat by going to a hotel somewhere."

"Don't you think it would be a greater victory for us if we conquered the demon food with some supplies within easy reach?" I suggested, with a painful recollection of the supply boat which came only twice a week, but carried delicacies of which Lucille never dreamed.

"No, it's best to take no chances." "There's the motor boat anyway. We could run over to the mainland."

"No, we couldn't," Lucille smiled. "Father is the only one who can run it, and he won't be here until Sunday."

Thus another ray of sunlight flickered out. A man of my build does not crank up a marine engine located near the floor of a boat. I might say he could not, but it is truer to say that he does not. If he is the least bit wise he does not even try it.

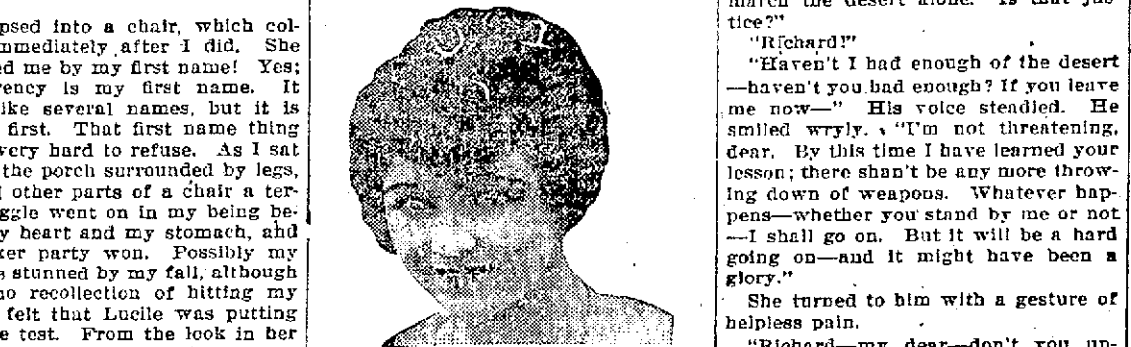

"I'll give the maid a week off," Lucille continued gayly. "As we're not going to eat anything we shall not really need her, and she has been wanting to go home for some time. I'll let her go back with the supply boat. We'll begin our fasting tomorrow by going without breakfast."

THE RED MIRAGE

By I. A. R. WYLLIE

Author of "The Native Born," "Dividing Waters," etc.

"Of whom—of what?"

"Of you—of my happiness."

She was silent an instant, battling with weakness.

"The letter is to you, Richard."

"May I read it?"

"Not now."

He took it from her, and she did not resist. The roughness in his voice and manner shook her as no gentleness, no pleading could have done. This man was indeed afraid, and this fear, linked with that great strength of purpose, was at once terrible and pathetic. She did not move, and he read the letter to the end in silence. Then he tore it deliberately across and across, and the pieces fluttered to the ground.

"I know all that—I guessed it," he said brutally. "Yet out there on the plateau you told me that you loved me."

She rose and faced him.

"I do love you," she said firmly. "I am not ashamed to tell you so—even now, for love like mine cannot hurt you. But in those days it was all different. I believed that we were equals—that we were two outcasts who had erred, not meanly or wickedly, but recklessly, and that we were fighting our way back to the thing we had lost. You were my comrade in exile, and I was yours. That was what I believed. But it was not true. You had lost nothing—and now your exile is over."

"And so you meant to desert me? Had fate not brought me back here, I should have had to hunt the world over for you."

"I thought that you would understand—that it was just."

"What? That when I was dying, hunted and friendless, a veritable worthless scamp, as you believed, you condescended to love me, to go forward shoulder to shoulder with me and make life worth living. Now that I have come into my own, that I appear more worthy of happiness, I am to be left to march the desert alone. Is that justice?"

"Richard?"

"Haven't I had enough of the desert—haven't you had enough? If you leave me now—"

His voice steeled. He smiled wryly. "I'm not threatening, dear. By this time I have learned your lesson; there shall be any more throwing down of weapons. Whatever happens—whether you stand by me or not—I shall go on. But it will be a hard going on—and it might have been a glory."

She turned to him with a gesture of helpless pain.

"Richard—my dear—don't you understand? It is fear of dimming that glory that drives me away from you. What am I? What should I be to you? A drag—a heavy burden. Even if I would I cannot go back into the old life. The world has passed judgment on the woman I was—the doors are shut against her. Only insignificant little Gabrielle Smith can go her way in peace."

"I care nothing for the world's judgment," he interrupted quietly. "Nor do you. If there is anything behind those closed doors worth having—which I doubt—we shall batter them in. And it is not to the woman who was that I am speaking. I do not ask her to go back anywhere. I ask her to go on with the life which we began together two years ago when she helped a desperate, intoxicated boy up Mrs. Ferrier's stairs—incidentally back to reason and self-respect. From that night we have been comrades." The grim laughter in his eyes faded. He held out his hand as though to take hers, then let it drop, leaving her free.

"And from that night I have loved Gabrielle Smith," he went on gently. "That was something you did not quite realize when you meant to leave me. Under one shape or another I have loved you all my life. Only when you first came I did not recognize you. You hid behind the little gray shadow of yourself, and I followed the mirage over the desert. And I suffered badly—until I found you, the reality of all I believed in—the oasis. Do you think I am going to let you turn me out into the loneliness and desolation? You know that I shall not, Gabrielle." He paused an instant, watching her. He saw the light dawn behind the mist of pain, and then he took her hands and held them with a joyful strength. "You saved my life twice," he said. "And you saved something greater than my life—my faith. That is a bond between us no one—not even you—can break. We belong to each other as I man and woman belong to each other perhaps once in a generation. You dare not deny a union so glorious, so sanctified."

She looked at him with steady radiant eyes.

"Do you believe that?"

"As you do."

"I have not dared to believe until now."

"You have given me courage to believe my own heart, Richard."

He did not kiss her, or, for a moment, speak. Yet what then passed between them was beyond words, above all tenderness. He led her at last toward the inner room.

"Come with me now, Gabrielle."

Within the hush had deepened. All life, all feeling seemed to draw together an awed expectancy about the little figure lying quietly in the midst of the great bed. Even the wig, still awry, could not take from the peaceful dignity of the small tired face beneath. A hand, heavily jeweled, rested on the shoulder of a man who knelt beside her. Her eyes had been closed as Gabrielle and Farquhar entered. They opened now and passed from one to the other. In that moment they looked very blue—almost young. She tried to speak and instead smiled faintly, apologetically, with a touch of wry self-mockery that passed, leaving only the quiet happiness. As though grown suddenly weary, the jeweled hand slipped from the man's shoulder, and he took it and bowed his head upon it.

"In a little while, my wife—a little while."

Her eyes closed in peaceful assent. They did not open again. To those watching it seemed that the room had grown darker. A little half-drawn sigh hovered on the silence and then drifted out on a ray of sunshine into the full daylight.

ENVOY.

Close by the barracks of the Foreign Legion there is a little garden and beyond the garden a kind of chapel.

Within are many relics of a glorious past.

On the walls are the pictures of the

There is a more serious stage of Catarrh than the annoyance caused by the stopped-up air passages, and the hawking and spitting and other distasteful features.

The real danger comes from the tendency of the disease to continue its course downward until the lungs become affected, and then dreaded consumption is on your path. Your own experience has taught you that the disease cannot be cured by great deed.

It is the Legion's Holy Ground.

Colonel Destinn entered for the last time. Outside, beyond the garden, he could hear the tramp of feet and the gay call of a bugle. Here everything was peace. Deep shadows hid the watching portraits, but in the midst, on either hand of the raised coffin, two great candles threw their light into the darkness and on the two men who, with drawn swords and sightless eyes, kept guard. They wore dark uniforms which the little chapel had never seen, and the coffin was hidden by a stranger's bag.

Colonel Destinn drew softly nearer to where a woman heavily veiled, knelt in prayer. Before her were two wreaths. One bore an imperial crown, the other a simple inscription— "To Our Comrade—Goetz von Berlichingen."

As Destinn approached the veiled woman looked up. He stood quietly beside her.

"Your highness, he died bravely. He was worthy of his race."

"I thank you, colonel."

He left her. He went out again into the evening sunshine. An orderly held his horse in readiness and four hundred men marked time to the strong rhythm of the Legion's war song. He swung himself into the saddle.

"In column—forward—march!" They swung out of the gates—out into the road. Half St. Hubert ran at their heels. On the outskirts the general with his suite waited to give mem' words.

"Return in honor, my children!"

The band crashed out a triumphant answer. Colonel Destinn's sword sank in farewell.

"Toujours, ma foi, le sac an des—" Singing, they left the glitter of lights and the sound of the town's joyous hubbub behind them. Colonel Destinn rode on alone. No man spoke to him. There was on his face a grave and peaceful knowledge.

And before him lay the desert and the night shadows, which were but a promise of another day.

"LOST BATTALION"
HELPED BY K. OF C.

(BY INTERNATIONAL NEWS)
Paris, Nov. 15.—One of the most inspiring chapters in the history of the American military forces in France was brought to a thrilling close the night of Oct. 7 when the Americans, sweeping the Boche before them, advanced sufficiently to rescue 500 New York soldiers who had been surrounded by the Boche since the preceding Friday. Joseph S. Byrne, 421 Tompkins avenue, Brooklyn, a Knight of Columbus secretary, was one of the first Americans to greet the New York soldiers when they returned to the American lines for food, medical treatment and rest after four days of the stiffest fighting yet seen on the American front.

The great American drama began on Friday, when the New York detachment reached the day's objectives late in the afternoon, after advancing through a wilderness of trees, underbrush and barbed-wire entanglements. The advance was so rapid that when darkness overtook the unit the Americans who had supported either flank had not yet come up and the New York unit found itself virtually isolated.

Darkness and difficulties of terrain made it impossible for the New Yorkers to go back toward the American lines, and it was determined they would hold their present position and endeavor at daybreak to establish liaison with their flanks.

At daylight it was discovered, however, that they were surrounded by the enemy. During the night a number of Germans had filtered through the American lines and established machine gun and trench-mortar positions to their rear. On either flank of the Yankees and in front of them the heights commanding their position were held by the Boche, who began firing on the American lines early in the day.

Than A Photograph

Of his dear ones or his close friends?

Most of the boys had their photos taken by Motl before they left and they'll like to have you send them your own taken at the same place.

If you come at once for a sitting you'll have them in good time to get within the postal regulations.

Open Sundays until Christmas.
